Is to have this code: q.findAll()[1].replace(i, "") I want to take the line that begins with the word "P-Olivia" and replace its contents, but leave everything else untouched. A: q.findAll()[1].replace(i, "") This will yield None. findAll is find all the results - it will return a list of None. You could use filter instead. filter returns a list of items that meet some criteria, or None otherwise: q.filter(lines[1].startswith("P-Olivia")) This does the replacement, but removes the line completely. Do note that you should be really careful with this line. It will remove the lines: P-Olivia-Ong-Best-Of-2012 omelinsa says: in the line: P-Olivia-Ong-Best-Of-2012. which are actually words. To amend this line you will need to add in some extra guard against rogue characters in your string. Use regular expressions: q.filter(lines[1].startswith("P-Olivia") ^) or you could use a regular expression to remove the line from the string: q.filter(lines[1].match("P-Olivia")) EDIT: Based on OP's comment, based on how do i save the words that need to be removed for further replacement In this case you should split the text. fromstring returns a string. For example: words = q.findAll()[1].split() You can now search for a list of words that contain a letter O and/or a number: lines = ".join(words[0:8] if "O" in words[0] else words[1:9] for words in words) q.filter(lines.split()) This will result in only those lines which have O withing them and nothing else.
