Born in New York City, Baum began his career writing music in Hollywood. His final film score, for the film The Man in the Glass Booth (1993), is his best known work. Biography Film scoring career Baum moved to New York after World War II and studied with Aaron Copland. He then entered the Columbia School of Music where he studied piano and orchestration. He worked for several years as an uncredited musician in Hollywood, eventually composing scores for films such as Valley of the Dolls, How to Murder Your Wife, The Preppie Murder Case, Screen Snapshots and The Caine Mutiny. He also worked with Robert Shaw in moving picture productions and he wrote the score for The Caine Mutiny. Starting in 1959, Baum wrote the music for 15 episodes of the Saturday morning children's adventure series The Wonderful World of Disney, as well as 20 TV advertisements, such as the Sabatino's Pizza commercial, where he met Dorothy Lamour. For the 1964-1965 season, Baum wrote the music for the television program The Wonderful World of Disney. He wrote several scores for the television series, and appeared as a guest conductor, often performing pieces on the piano himself. A number of stories dealing with his youth and leaving home are collected in the book, The Good Old Days: Karl Baum, Composer, (1993). Working in Los Angeles again, Baum wrote the score for a production of Lola, the mechanized detective, written by Robert Shaw. The score featured Shaw narrating the detective's dialogue over a series of clips from The Maltese Falcon, Charlie Chan and the Secret Weapon
