Elden Ring

I think Elden Ring's combat system is great. It's responsive, and has a slick feel to it. You're always in control of what's happening, and you can do everything you want to, or even have your actions be automatic. You can also choose from a wide range of moves, and choose to use certain skills or buffs depending on what you think you're going to need. It's easy to use, and a lot of fun to play. I like how the big boss enemies all have different abilities, and how some of them are ridiculously hard to beat. Some of them you'll breeze through easily, and others are incredibly difficult. For some of them, it even felt like you'd always have a chance of winning if you used certain skills. It's nice that there's so many different types of things happening. There's a lot of variety in the way they're set up, and the way battles play out. Each boss has their own strengths and weaknesses, so you won't always be fighting against a straightforward brute. I also like how the game gives you lots of choices about how your character looks. You can choose different colors for everything, you can have an elf or dwarf, you can customize things as much or as little as you like. It made me feel in control, and gave the game a unique feel that sets it apart from everything else I've played. My main complaint is that sometimes I had to go searching for things. Like I said, in the beginning, it's just all part of the tutorial, but after a while it became a problem. I got the hang of it eventually, but it became a nuisance at times. Elden Ring's music is pretty good, too. It's dramatic, but not too loud, and adds to the story along with the characters. I especially love the parts with the bards. I'm a sucker for bards, so I love when that guy comes in to sing and the music is this epic, sweeping, epic stuff. Bottom line: I think Elden Ring is a really good game. The combat system is great, the storyline is one of the best in recent memory, and the music is a lot of fun. It has a lot of different things
