It also runs.Q: T-SQL to create and insert row into table Hi I have tried to make a query that will create and insert new row in the table called Licitaion, I want to be able to have 3 fields in my table. First is a registration number, which has to be sequential, then another is the number of times the registration number has been used, and a third is the firm's name. The registration number does not have to be consecutive but it does have to be sequential. I can not use any sort of loop as I need to append at the end of the table. As this is only a limited trial I could just get the data around the table to work for now. A: If the sequence is based on the registration number and it's possible that the same registration number may be used many times, then this will create a sequence and limit that sequence to the values you specify in the @RegistrationNumber_Seq and @RegistrationNumber_Limit values. For example, assuming the sequence is one-based, this would create a sequence of integers from 1
